I want to increment the reception of my cellular phone. I have a house on the beach, and there I can't receive the cell service, but 500 meters near to the cell center, The signal is good. I don't have any mountain or big buildings between the cell center and the house.
How can I increment the reception of my phone. Can I build a special antenna or probably buy a antenna amplifier to UHF?. How can I connect that to the phone?
All the answers are welcomed!.
Please!.

: I brought the HT to work with me today, and found out that it : doesn't work worth a flip here in the office using the ducky.
: I'd like to hold the spending down to a couple of bucks here.
: One idea that occurs to me is to fashion a 1/4 wave dipole
: from coax by folding back 1/4 wave of the outer shield. Let's : see... a dipole is nominally 75 ohms.

They used brazing rod, a piece of PC board, and a BNC connector, but I used #12 solid copper wire, .005" brass sheet, and soldered it into a UHF connector, then filled the rest of the connector with bath tub caulking.
